Atlanta Electrical Contractors Career Day

Seniors who are interested in learning about various pathways into the electrical industry should plan to sign up for this event which will take place on Friday, April 17th (9 am–1 pm) at the Atlanta Electrical Joint Apprenticeship Training Center (6601 Bay Circle, Peachtree Corners, GA). The event is FREE, but anyone planning to attend should email and RSVP to Nic Schofer by March 31st. This Career Day is designed specifically to help students connect with employers and, ultimately, get hired. See the flyer for more information.

The Atlanta Electrical Contractors Association represents 43 electrical contractors across Metro Atlanta. They also sponsor a 4-year paid electrical apprenticeship through the AEJATC. Apprentices attend class once every two weeks and work with a contractor for the remaining weekdays. Participants earn a strong hourly wage, receive employer-paid benefits, and gain the training needed for a high-demand, long-term career.

Schoolhouse.world Offers Free Peer-to-Peer SAT Tutoring

Official SAT Tutoring is a partnership between College Board and Schoolhouse.world, a nonprofit created by Khan Academy® founder Sal Khan, to bring more personalized support and meaningful connection to learning. Through extensive research, they have found that students who learn in small groups, trained by peer tutors made prep feel more motivating and more supportive. Many of these learners later returned as tutors themselves, helping the next group of students succeed. The peer tutors—students who excelled on the SAT—work online with small groups of students over a period of four weeks to strengthen their test-taking skills, build their confidence, and help them feel ready for test day. Students can sign up for bootcamps in Math and/or Reading and Writing. Join an SAT Bootcamp today!

Build Innovative Solutions to Real Fintech Challenges

All high school students in Georgia are invited to Kennesaw State University (3333 George Busbee Drive NW) on March 28th (8 am–6 pm) for an exciting hackathon where you will compete in teams to solve real-world problems in the world of financial technology. Your challenge is to come up with creative, AI-focused ideas that could help strengthen the economy of countries like Zambia, places that are growing fast but still face obstacles such as limited technology, not enough trained workers, and payment systems that don't always work well together. Coding knowledge is not required! Whether you're into coding, design, or business strategy, this is your chance to innovate, collaborate, and make a real impact on an emerging market, all while competing for prizes! Electrical Systems and Sustainability Summer Program at Georgia Tech

As outlined in the flyer, this sponsored summer program gives select high school students hands-on exposure to:

- Installing electrical fixtures
- Reading electrical prints
- Understanding core electrical principles
- Exploring facilities management and sustainable systems
- Learning through the RealCareer Electrical Wiring Kit program
- Participating in off-campus visits
- Earning a certificate of completion from Georgia Institute of Technology

The program runs from July 6-17 and is held primarily on Georgia Tech's Atlanta campus. This is a FULL scholarship (students are only responsible for a $25 application fee).

This is an incredible opportunity for students interested in engineering, construction, sustainability, skilled trades, or STEM career pathways. The immersive, hands-on structure makes it especially impactful for students who thrive in applied learning environments. Registration Link Contact summerpeaks@gatech.edu with questions.
